THE SUPERTRAMP SONGBOOK

Since the members of the Symphonic Rock Project are big admirers of Supertramp, it seems appropriate that the Project has recorded a number of compositions by Richard Davies and Rodger Hodgson, the founder-members of the group. The recordings have been issued on this CD, a fitting tribute to the fine music of Supertramp.

Streamlined to a core of five pivotal members, Rick Davies (lead vocals, keyboards), Roger Hodgson (vocals, guitar), John Helliwell (saxophone), Dougie Thomson (bass) and Bob C. Benberg (drums), Supertramp successfully collaborated as an innovative force in rock for many years. Formed in London in 1969 by Davies and Hodgson, the group's original line-up consisted of the founding pair plus saxophonist Dave Winthrop, guitarist Richard Palmer and drummer Bob Miller. In 1970, Miller was replaced by Kevin Currie and Frank Farrell was added on bass. Soon after Supertramp's second album, all members left the group, except for Davies and Hodgson. Regrouped with bassist Dougie Thomson, saxophonist John Helliwell and drummer Bob C. Benberg, Supertramp spent a year rehearsing and writing before the breakthrough album "Crime Of The Century" was released in 1973. The group's first hit single was "Dreamer," in 1975 (U.K. charts). Many albums and hits later, Hodgson left after the group's 1983 tour to go solo. Supertramp made an album in 1985 with guest star Dave Gilmour, but since then the band's line-up has consisted of Rick Davies, John Helliwell, Dougie Thomson and Bob C. Benberg.

What do the members of Supertramp do when they are not recording, rehearsing or touring? Davies plays tennis and rides his bicycle. He tries to ride at least an hour a day and likes to feel fit. He spends a lot of time listening to music, and has quite an extensive jazz record collection. Helliwell also plays tennis, sometimes with Davies or with Norman, the band's engineer. He reads, practices, and listens to jazz. And he is third clarinetist with the Topanga Symphony Orchestra. Thomson is an avid yachtsman and loves to travel. He has travelled all over the world, often living on a boat.

On this CD, the Symphonic Rock Project's singular and evocative wisdom glows consistently through Supertramp's timeless melodies, melodies rooted in jazz, rhythm 'n' blues, the Beatles and the pop music of the 1950s and 1960s.
